

I connected with so many people don't know how much and currently I have nearly 350 connections. Ninety percent of them are Flutter developers, I think. There are some people who haven't yet accepted the invite. Through LinkedIn its another source of learning and knowing about new features, tools or methods on how to do such operations and all. LinkedIn has been very informative for me and I've added some of my projects and wrote two articles and did some posts. So it all helped me connect some developers. And I learned so many ideas, concepts, got to know about new terms, many community groups as well. I don't have much recommendations to them. From my experience "If we think it, we just need to make an effort" at least need to try and be consistent with the process.